| Domestic commercial arbitration in Australia has in recent years been in a serious decline. However, recent reforms, including the implementation of the UNCITRAL Model Law via the State Commercial Arbitration Acts, are intended to breathe new life into domestic commercial arbitration. In that context, the Institute of Arbitrators and Mediators Australia (IAMA) recently introduced new IAMA Arbitration Rules that apply from 2 May 2014. Based on the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules, the new IAMA Arbitration Rules implement key changes in procedure, speed and costs. This article comments on the new IAMA Arbitration Rules and considers whether they will enliven domestic commercial arbitration. .... | 307 |
