WHY LAWYERS NEED A BROAD SOCIAL EDUCATION

Martha C Nussbaum

Lawyers need a wide education and attempts to reduce legal studies to intense, two year degrees should be resisted. This article was delivered as Professor Nussbaum's keynote address to the Australian Law Journal and Australian Academy of Law Conference, The Future of Australian Legal Education, held in Sydney on 11-13 August 2017. 894

REGULATING ADMISSIONS: ARE WE THERE YET?

Sandford D Clark

Establishing appropriate threshold competencies for entrants to a disrupted legal profession is challenging. Helping various providers in the continuum of legal education to impart those competencies, in complementary ways and to comparable standards, is even more difficult for regulators. While much progress has been made in establishing and applying standards in recent years, we need to develop and apply many new and possibly unpalatable professional education policies if the legal profession is to maintain the privilege of self-regulation in a rapidly changing society. 907
